Membership benefits

Access to information

Membership unlocks the member portal access to the latest industry trends, information and insights such as ICMEC's User Centred Design findings, articles, research and advocacy papers. Leveraging our international presence, we provide a broad, global perspective with targeted information to better enable your work against CSE.

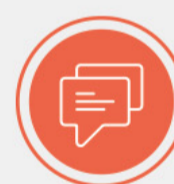

Ecosystem navigation and warm introductions

Members can review descriptions of other organisations with capabilities relevant to the fight. You can receive tailored facilitations and introductions enabling your connection with the right people in the ecosystem.

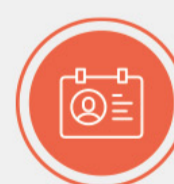

Opportunities for collaborative projects

Membership opens the door to a number of working groups that meet regularly to work towards a common goal. Projects are data-driven, and serve to prove or deny the value of bringing data together from multiple data owners with fresh analytical approaches.

Team alignment

Membership allows your whole team to get on the same page, with access to online and face-to-face networking events, lunch and learn sessions and through the online portal.

Influence

Our members demonstrate their commitment to contribute to combatting child sexual exploitation. You can use your membership as a symbol of your commitment and be invited to share your achievements and stories at our webinars, forums and panel discussions. Membership helps you to raise your profile and importantly the societal awareness of CSE.

ICMEC Australia Membership

- Our Membership programme for those working to make the world safer for children is now on its way.
- We know, from our work with offline coalitions that collaboration across industries and sectors is a vital aspect of the response to the complex problem of child sexual exploitation.
- Membership will give insights, information, and toolkit back to those who are taking action on this problem.

Why should I become a member?

As a member of ICMEC Australia, you are joining an ecosystem of people working to combat child sexual exploitation (CSE). Members are committed to learning from each other and taking collective action. Individuals from a broad range of sectors can join, these include financial services, telecommunications, social media, image hosting, law enforcement, regulators and academia.

Reasons why ICMEC is implementing a Membership programme

Membership offers a more formal way to complement our various offline Forums and Working Groups. It provides useful digital assets for those fighting CSE to access, learn from and apply without having to wait for the next collaboration session.

Members can work together in private forums, continuing discourse when they want to do so. ICMEC can share research findings to a restricted audience, diminishing the risk of the information falling into the wrong hands. Numerous ideas related to membership arose from the Innovation Day, including the ideas of certification, recognition and awards for those working to remove children from harm.

Register your interest

Register now to hear about our membership launch later this year. You can email: members@icmec.org.au

Although many stakeholders have been involved in our research on the membership components needed, we do not have all of the answers right now. We are interested to include your views on how the membership programme components are built out over time.
